Let's Start!

Let's learn how to make Lo Mein noodles!

Learning Outcome

Accurately use information in social situations.

Ask your partner:

- Do you like to eat noodles? Why or why not?
- How do you cook noodles?

Can Do Statements

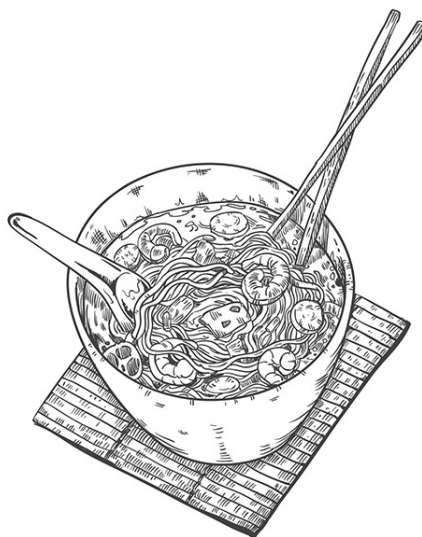

- I can talk about food and customs.
- I can start a conversation with a stranger.
- I can ask for and give instructions.

Let's Explore!

Sally is at a noodle shop! She wants to learn about how a Chinese dish is made!
What dish is it?

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

Chef: Welcome to Lo's Lo Mein! I'm Lo.

Sally: Nice to meet you Lo! I saw a sign outside about hand-pulled noodles. Can you show me how you make them?

Chef: Yes! Follow me. Where are you visiting from? Are you enjoying China?

Sally: Yes! I'm from the States.

Chef: So, we already have the ball of dough here. First, I divide the dough into 6 equal parts. I stretch each part into a long strip and then bring the two ends together. Then, you stretch it again and join the ends again. Now, I'm going to twirl and spin the whole batch so it looks like a jump rope.

Sally: Hey, it looks like noodles now.

Chef: Yes, that's how you make hand-pulled noodles in 30 seconds. I have to boil them now.

Sally: Can I try them?

Chef: Yes. I'm going to make you some Ban Mian, it's a popular noodle dish here.

Sally: I love sweet and sour chicken! That's my favorite Chinese dish!

Let's Practice!

Learning Points

Asking for and Giving Instructions

When you want to ask how to do something, you can ask someone to give you instructions. When you give someone instructions, you can use sequence words like first, next, then and the Imperative.

Asking for Instructions	Giving Instructions
How do you (do this)? How do I ... ? Can you show me how you ... ? What is the first step?	First, (you) ... Then, (you) ... Next, (you) ... Finally, (you) ...

Talking to Strangers

When you are travelling, you meet new people. When you meet new people (strangers), you use the expression Nice to meet you.

When you talk to strangers, use small talk (informal chat about the weather, the city you are in, or general details about you).

You can also ask questions. Some questions start with Wh/Hw- words like: Who? or What?

Examples:

- Who is that?
- What do you do?
